AS 1102 - AS Advising Seminar (0.5 Credits)

A course for students new to Cornell centered on interacting with their faculty advisor and other students in a small-group setting. Through exercises and/or short assignments, students will build awareness of resources to help them navigate their new environment. The seminar will facilitate a sense of community and identity as an A&S student and provide a forum for faculty advisors to actively engage with their advisees throughout the first semester. Students will also have opportunities to attend workshops on a range of topics, including career development, building study skills, navigating the academic landscape, special academic programs, and thriving at Cornell.
